CEO, SAVE, Inc.

Friends of SAVE,

SAVE has long been a voice for those who cannot speak for themselves, a refuge for those with nowhere else to go. This advocacy stems from our founding, a lesson well learned from the altruists who saw a need in the community and sprung to action. SAVE, Inc. was founded as a final stop for those dying from the opportunistic infections that accompany AIDS, a place to die with dignity and understanding. SAVE, Inc. is now a place of life, a place to find health, happiness and a future. As a direct result of the efforts of so many in our local and global community; SAVE is no longer just a place for goodbyes but a place of healing. It has been a remarkable journey, we have fought this pandemic in the cities and towns of our 15 county service area for well over twenty years – but the fight is far from over.

HIV is not abating, it is not a disease of yesterday, it is here now and if we hope for a better tomorrow we must act today. Both locally and nationally we are seeing a rise in new infections; primarily in people under the age of 25, African Americans, minority woman, young men who have sex with men, and those living in poverty. This is the next generation of HIV. Young people becoming infected before they can vote, spending the rest of their lives fighting discrimination, poverty, a broken healthcare system, and their own immune systems. These trends are a frightening reality, HIV is creeping back into the lives of young Americans - it is time for us to rise to action. Again we must be the voice for those in need; we must be at the vanguard of a renewed effort to curb AIDS.

HIV is sometimes a forgotten plague in the US, a disease of another continent, of another era. We must remind our neighbors, friends, city council members, congress persons, and senators that this is not the case. In fact, to receive US AIDS funding (PEPFAR) foreign nations must have a national plan to combat HIV/AIDS, yet the United States has no such plan. There is a moment in this country, an opportunity to remake the future of this disease, but this effort will require advocates to spread the message; from the cul-de-sacs of Prairie Village to Jefferson City and on to Washington.

Ringling the bell, alerting our community to the crises is a part of the solution, an integral step. Yet we must also continue to actively fight HIV in our community everyday. Housing is a fundamental and potent weapon in this struggle. Supportive Housing has been proven to not only reduce the deadly force of HIV (lower viral counts, higher T cell counts, decreased fatalities) but to also reduce risk factors for transmission – preventing the spread of HIV. For almost five years now we have known through research and scientific evaluation that housing is the most urgent, unmet need for those living with HIV, and we now have proof that housing is a powerful intervention in fighting this disease. We have been given the information and the impetus to act. Now we must answer. I firmly believe that we can fight back this resurgent foe, but the time is now.

We are so grateful for your support over the past year, so much has been accomplished and so much remains to be done. But, with your support, SAVE will be there to serve as a safety net, a home, and a place of new beginnings for those living with or at risk for HIV/AIDS in Kansas City. On behalf of our staff and the nearly 700 individuals we serve – thank you. You are the heart of SAVE, Inc.!

If you are interested in joining SAVE's advocacy efforts on behalf of those we serve, visit our new website at www.SAVEINCKC.org and click on the "Advocacy" toolbar.

60% of those living with HIV/AIDS will need some form of housing assistance. --NAHC

From its very inception, SAVE, Inc. has been the very embodiment of community and compassion in action. SAVE was born out of crisis; a crushing need for understanding and care for those afflicted by AIDS and a group of volunteers who were moved to action. SAVE, Inc. has grown from the first AIDS-specific hospice in Missouri (8 beds) to an organization that houses almost 700 individuals and families every month. This growth is an expression of the altruism that pervades Kansas City. The munificent individuals, corporations, and foundations listed in the pages that follow are the forces that have allowed SAVE to exponentially expand to meet the need in our community, and the personification of what makes Kansas City the quintessential “home”town. Truly, what more profound statement can be made of our values, by housing our neighbors we strengthen our community. SAVE was founded because too many of those dying from HIV/AIDS were left homeless, penniless, and alone. SAVE, Inc. was the right thing to do. Yet, the power of SAVE’s services are so much more than just support for those fighting HIV, it is a key to stopping the spread. We now know that housing is a key to preventing the spread of HIV.

After years of research, concrete evidence has arisen that codifies the reality that supportive housing for those living with or at risk for HIV/AIDS is not only essential to living with the disease but also a key intervention in preventing its transmission. By providing stable housing we can; reduce the risk of exposure and transmission, improve access to medical care, and subsequently improve medical outcomes. In fact, housing has been proven to be the lynch pin to not only ensuring entry into medical care (and Antiviral Therapy), but also in preventing those infected from falling out of treatment and improving medical adherence. In short, as a result of supportive housing and its impact on healthcare, we find drastically lower viral loads in those people stably housed. Thus, we reduce mortality and the likelihood of transmission.

These realities have led science to a realization that many of us have known for decades, that HIV transmission is not necessarily a result of a “risky person” but a risky situation, a symptom of environment rather than just an individual. For years many followed the conceit that behavior followed the individual instead of behavior being a byproduct of the situation. Supportive housing has proven these assumptions to be erroneous. We can prevent risky behaviors and thus HIV transmission by providing supportive housing. Research has found that homelessness drives risk behaviors, forcing individuals into exaggerated risk of violence, drug addiction, and transaction sex – forcing people into impossible choices, where mere survival trumps fear of HIV. Housing is a structural intervention that has an independent, casual role in HIV prevention.

We now have proof of the reality that SAVE, Inc. and our clients have been living for over twenty years. Housing is the key to survival, prevention, and dignity. Housing can change the future for our clients, our community, and the next generation. Your support can decimate HIV’s corrosive, insidious threat. Together, we can stop AIDS.

1/2 of all new infections occur in people under the age of 25

This is the story of one of SAVE's clients. Due to the stigma that still haunts those affected by HIV, names have been altered*

He waited in a small room for what seemed like an eternity; the dull hum of the waiting room and sounds of shuffling feet echoing in his ears. He waited until the door opened. He waited until the answer came and everything came crashing down. The wait was over. He was HIV positive. It was the day before his 18th birthday.

Jamal* discovered he was HIV positive on the eve of adulthood. He was diagnosed with full-blown AIDS before he turned twenty-one. It is nearly impossible to understand the tumult and seismic shifts he endured during this brief period where life dealt him blow after blow and hope faded dimmer by the hour. Yet when you look into his eyes and listen to him speak hopelessness or resignation is far from what you find. Jamal is planning for the future, crafting a better tomorrow indicative of the promise his youth possesses. He is hopeful because he has a place to begin, a place to heal, a place he can call home. Jamal is one of the well over 600 individuals that SAVE, Inc. houses every month. His story is not easy to tell or to hear. Yet what becomes clear is that for the first time in too long, Jamal is choosing his path rather than just waiting for life to dictate his next move. He can live a life of dignity – and dignity starts at home...

After I found out, I wasn't sure what to do, so for awhile I didn't do much. I got kicked out of my house. I was stupid, hung out with the wrong people, and got into trouble...I messed it up. I couldn't stay right." Jamal spent months couch surfing or sleeping wherever he could – his body paid the price. Forced in and out of hospitals and desperately trying to regain his health, Jamal realized he needed to bring his life under control. "I stopped hanging out with the people I had been, really tried to fix my life. I figured better late than never. Then I got a home through SAVE, everything changed." SAVE gave Jamal another lease on life. "I met Lisa [Elmer, a SAVE Housing Specialist], she changed my life."

THE NEXT GENERATION. SAVE will evolve along with the disease, striving to better serve our clients and prevent the spread of HIV/AIDS

Now Jamal's health has stabilized. He returned to school and earned his high school diploma. "I was able to get back to school 'cause I had a place of my own, I could choose the people I let into my life." Jamal now plans to further his education and become an IT specialist. "SAVE is the reason I can do anything, I couldn't afford any of this [housing or school] without them." Yet SAVE is much more than just housing support. "Lisa is always there for me, she's the person I bounce ideas off of, she cares. You never know about people, but I know Lisa cares and is there."

Jamal's story is difficult, the fact that someone so young will struggle with the complications, rigors, and setbacks that AIDS delivers is devastating. Sadly, we can't alter the past, but we can change the future. By providing a home to Jamal, we know that we can help improve his health, prevent transmission, and allow him to live a life he chooses, a life of hope and dignity. Housing is the change that so many are waiting for.
